

Risk-Off Week — ETF Bleed Forces the First Real Flush Since April

BTC -4.42% · ETH -4.47% (lost $2K) · BNB +8.20% (the only major in the green) · Spot BTC ETF -$1.42B (3rd-largest weekly outflow ever, 10-day streak -$2.97B) · F&G 30 → 29 (still Fear) · HYPE $684M MEGA unlock Saturday

1 · WEEK IN MACRO

Setup in one paragraph: equities held up, commodities rotated, the dollar held flat, and crypto bled. The US market was closed Monday May 25 for Memorial Day, so the working week ran Tuesday May 26 to Friday May 29. Inside those four sessions the S&P 500 ETF (SPY) added 0.86%, the Nasdaq 100 (QQQ) added 1.70%, and gold was effectively flat. The relevant macro moves happened underneath: oil bled most of the week before ripping +6.86% today (Monday Jun 1) on geopolitical premium, long bonds were flat, and the dollar index closed the week at 98.94 (Tue open 98.99) — effectively flat WoW.

Asset	Tue Open	Fri Close	WoW %	Note
SPY	$750.01	$756.48	+0.86%	Risk on inside TradFi
QQQ	$725.96	$738.31	+1.70%	Tech led the week
GLD	$415.16	$417.12	+0.47%	Flat after intraweek dip
USO	$136.34	$129.09	-5.32%	Oil bled all week — then ripped +6.86% Mon Jun 1
TLT	$85.34	$85.76	+0.49%	Long bonds flat
DXY	98.99	98.94	-0.05%	Essentially flat WoW

The week's macro headlines:

- S&P held the highs: equities closed the week at the top of the range, no panic, no breadth break — TradFi is not the problem for crypto.
- Oil bled four sessions then exploded Monday: USO -5.32% Tue-Fri then +6.86% today on geopolitics. The whiplash is a clean signal that commodity premium is alive.
- Dollar held flat: DXY went 98.99 → 98.94 on the week (-0.05%). The macro engine was not running against crypto from the dollar side — the bleed came from inside crypto, not from DXY.
- FOMC June 16-17 is the only event that matters between now and end-month. The June meeting is an SEP/dot-plot meeting — the Fed updates its rate forecast. Until then, the macro calendar is light.

Bottom line for crypto: TradFi spent the week in a quiet bullish regime. Crypto spent the week in a quiet bearish regime. Until the ETF tape turns green, that decoupling can continue — the macro setup is not the problem.

2 · MY TAKE — THE WEEK IN ONE PARAGRAPH

Regime call: ETF-led de-risking week. Spot BTC ETFs printed their third-largest weekly outflow on record (-$1.42B) inside a record 10-day outflow streak (-$2.97B). On-chain absorption held the $72K-73K floor all month, but it finally cracked into today's session — BTC traded $71,256 intraday. The single positive surprise was BNB, up +8.20% on the week and +11.76% on Saturday May 30 alone, on the back of VanEck's BNB ETP launch and a Binance product teaser. Everything else in the verified set was red.

Weekly takeaway: the buyer-of-last-resort floor cracked. That is a structural change in the daily picture, but it does not yet rise to a regime change — the macro setup is fine, equities are at the highs, and the only fundamental catalyst large enough to flip the tape (FOMC) is two weeks away.

Week ahead in one sentence: Saturday's HYPE $684M MEGA unlock is the single biggest single-name catalyst; outside that, expect chop with downside skew until the ETF outflow streak finally breaks or the FOMC moves the macro.

3 · WEEKLY MARKET SNAPSHOT — VERIFIED 7-DAY MOVES

Weekly window: open of May 25 → close of May 31. All WoW% figures recomputed from finance OHLC and cross-checked against CoinLore historical daily closes. Where a second source did not exist within tolerance, the precise percentage is dropped.

Token	Open May 25	Close May 31	WoW %	Note
BTC	$76,976	$73,575	-4.42%	High $78,015 (May 26), low $72,364 (May 29)
ETH	$2,101	$2,007	-4.47%	Lost $2,000 first time in months on Mon Jun 1
SOL	$85.17	$82.32	-3.35%	Pure beta to majors
BNB	$656.22	$710.01	+8.20%	★ +11.76% on May 30 on Binance teaser/VanEck ETP
XRP	$1.35	$1.33	-1.48%	Barely budged — relative outperformer
LINK	$9.43	$9.14	-3.08%	Drift lower with the complex

WoW % moves · week of May 25-31 · two-source verified

Reading the chart: Five of six tier-1 names red. The one green bar (BNB) is the entire week's story for risk-on flow. The narrow spread between -3% and -4.5% on the rest of the majors tells you the move was correlated — broad de-risking, not a single-name event.

Sentiment: Fear & Greed sat at 30 (Fear) at week-start and 29 (Fear) at week-end — basically unchanged. A month ago the index was 39 (still Fear, but higher). The regime has been Fear for the whole month.

4 · TOP MOVERS — WHO LED, WHO LAGGED

The week had one leader, one outperformer in defeat, and four laggards.

Token	WoW	What drove it
★ BNB	+8.20%	VanEck launched a BNB-linked exchange-traded product and Binance teased a June product reveal. The combination ripped BNB +11.76% on Saturday May 30 alone, breaking the months-long $700 resistance. The first regulated institutional access vehicle for BNB structurally changes the demand profile.
XRP	-1.48%	Outperformer in defeat. While everything else dropped 3-4.5%, XRP barely moved. No specific catalyst, but the relative strength is consistent with a token that has already done its de-rate.
▼ ETH	-4.47%	The week's worst tier-1. ETH lost $2,000 on Mon Jun 1 for the first time in months. Spot ETH ETF flows ran roughly $241M weekly outflow / $540M monthly (per SoSoValue via crypto.news). The break of a long-held psychological level matters more than the size of any single day's move.
▼ BTC	-4.42%	Bled through the $72K-73K floor that held all of May. ETF outflow streak hit 10 days for record $2.97B cumulative; the week alone bled $1.42B (3rd-largest weekly ever). Strategy disposed of 32 BTC for $2.5M — the first corporate sale by the largest holder since 2022.
▼ SOL	-3.35%	No SOL-specific story. Pure correlated beta to the majors. Trailing edge of the move but no fundamental driver.
▼ LINK	-3.08%	Drift lower with the complex. Same story as SOL.

What this tells you: Catalysts still matter in a fear regime — BNB is up because something real happened (VanEck ETP). Beta names trailed because nothing positive landed for them. In risk-off weeks, story-driven names decouple from index beta; this week was a clean example of that.

5 · BITCOIN — THE WEEKLY DEEP DIVE

Bitcoin opened the week at $76,976 on Sunday May 25, tagged the weekly high of $78,015 on Monday May 26, then bled for four sessions to a low of $72,364 by Thursday May 29. The weekly close on Sunday May 31 was $73,575 — down 4.42% from the week's open. Today (Mon Jun 1) the tape broke the $72K floor for the first time in May, hitting $71,256 intraday.

The flow story was the whole story. Spot BTC ETFs redeemed for 10 consecutive trading days through Friday May 29 for a cumulative outflow of approximately $2.97B — the longest streak since the funds launched in January 2024. The week of May 26-29 alone bled $1.42B — the 3rd-largest weekly outflow ever recorded. IBIT contributed $966M; GBTC contributed $175M. The daily flow profile (May 26-29): -$334M, -$733M, -$229M, -$125M (sum 1.42B).

BTC · weekly OHLC May 25 - Jun 1 · $73K floor cracked into the new week

Spot BTC ETF · weekly daily flow profile (sum -$1.42B, 3rd-largest week ever)

Structural posture: BTC futures open interest sat near $42.6B and options OI near $40B at month-end (per cryptonews.net citing Coinglass). The Deribit June 26 expiry carries roughly $8.5B notional with max pain at $77,500 — well above current spot, biasing dealer positioning toward defending that level if BTC rallies into expiry. The headline supply-side item: Strategy (formerly MicroStrategy) sold 32 BTC for $2.5M between May 26-31 at $77,135 to fund preferred-stock dividends — the first reported BTC sale by the largest corporate holder since 2022.

KEY LEVELS — WEEK AHEAD

Side	Level	Context
Resistance	$73,000-73,500	Old floor, now overhead — first sellers on any retest
Resistance	$74,500	ETF redistribution zone all of May
Resistance	$77,500	Max-pain anchor for the Jun 26 Deribit expiry (per Coinglass) — gravitational pull if we rally
Support	$71,000-71,500	Today's intraday low ($71,256) — local floor
Support	~$68,000-69,000	Next structural shelf below current price

Week-ahead bottom line: Until the ETF outflow streak snaps or a positive structural catalyst lands, sellers will defend $73-74K and rallies are short opportunities. A clean reclaim of $74,500 with green ETF prints would be the first sign the regime is turning. The FOMC on Jun 16-17 is the only event with enough gravity to flip the macro — until then, expect chop with downside skew.

6 · THE 5 STORIES THAT DEFINED THE WEEK

1. Bitcoin spot ETFs printed a 10-day outflow streak — a new record.

Ten consecutive trading days of net redemptions through Friday May 29, cumulative $2.97B. The longest streak since the funds launched in January 2024. The week alone (May 26-29) saw $1.42B leave — the third-largest weekly outflow ever recorded. IBIT carried $966M of that, GBTC contributed $175M. Three-source verified (Yahoo Finance, KuCoin, CryptoRank).

2. ETH lost the $2,000 line for the first time in months.

ETH closed the week at $2,007 — barely above $2,000 — then broke under on Monday Jun 1 ($1,967 intraday). Spot ETH ETFs ran roughly $241M outflow weekly / $540M monthly per SoSoValue (via crypto.news). The break of a months-long psychological floor is more important than the size of any single day's move. CoinLore historical confirmed the weekly close at $2,007.

3. BNB ripped +11.76% in one day on VanEck ETP launch and Binance teaser.

Saturday May 30 saw BNB trade from $642 to $718 (+11.76%). The trigger: VanEck launched a BNB-linked exchange-traded product — the first regulated institutional access vehicle for BNB — combined with a Binance product teaser. The weekly close was $710 (+8.20% WoW), the only major in the green for the week.

4. Strategy (MSTR) sold 32 BTC — first reported sale since 2022.

Strategy disposed of 32 BTC for $2.5M at an average $77,135 between May 26-31 to fund preferred-stock dividends. It is a tiny trade against the firm's total holdings — but it is the first reported BTC disposal by the largest corporate holder in three years. The signal value is in the precedent. Sourced via news.bitcoin.com and the company's SEC 8-K.

5. Mystery whale paid $30M to exit a $1.26B IBIT block off-exchange.

On May 27 a single counterparty paid roughly $30M in slippage to exit a $1.26B BlackRock IBIT position off-exchange (per CryptoSlate). Paying that magnitude of premium to get out — rather than working an order over days — implies a strongly time-constrained seller. CryptoSlate sourced the trade; single-source on the slippage figure but the trade itself is documented.

7 · SECTOR SCORECARD (WEEK)

Sector	Read	Leaders / Laggards	Note
Majors	Underperformed	BTC, ETH, SOL all -3 to -5%	ETF flows drove the whole tier-1 group lower
Exchange tokens	Rotated In	Leader: BNB +8.20%	VanEck ETP + Binance teaser; the week's only major positive WoW
Payment rails	Mixed	XRP -1.48% (relative outperformer)	XRP held while ETH/SOL/LINK bled — earned positioning
Oracles / DeFi	Underperformed	LINK -3.08%	Pure beta; no narrative catalyst
L1 alts	Underperformed	SOL -3.35%	Correlated to BTC

Rotation read for next week: Catalyst-driven names (BNB) outperform in fear regimes; pure-beta names (SOL, LINK) trail. If you have a thesis going into next week, weight it toward names with fresh structural news rather than majors waiting on flow turn.

8 · TOKEN UNLOCKS — WEEK AHEAD (Jun 1-7)

The week ahead carries the biggest single-token unlock of June: HYPE on Saturday Jun 6 at $684M (2.54% of supply). Outside that, four smaller unlocks distribute through the week — two of them at 10%+ of circulating supply for their tokens, which is real dilution risk for the holders. All dates and sizes from CryptoRank; HYPE and EIGEN cross-confirmed via secondary articles, the smaller three rely on CryptoRank alone.

Date	Token	Value	Supply %	Note
Mon Jun 1	EIGEN	$7.51M	6.55%	04:00 UTC · cliff · already passed today
Tue Jun 2	ENA	$3.55M	0.49%	07:00 UTC · small relative size · per CryptoRank
Fri Jun 5	OPN	$4.24M	10.89%	12:00 UTC · large % of supply · per CryptoRank
★★ Sat Jun 6	HYPE	$684M	2.54%	00:00 UTC · MEGA · headline catalyst of the week
Sat Jun 6	RED	$4.82M	10.87%	16:00 UTC · large % of supply · per CryptoRank

Unlock-pressure read: HYPE on Saturday is the only one that meaningfully moves a major narrative. The rest are dilution risks for the affected tokens only. If you hold any of these the calendar date matters more than the size — verify against your own tracker before sizing into events.

9 · WEEKLY ALTCOIN NEWS — ACTIONABLE

BNB +8.20% WoW — VanEck ETP launch + Binance product teaser drove the only positive major.

BNB closed last week at $710 after a Saturday rip from $642 to $718 (+11.76% intraday on May 30). The combination of VanEck's BNB-linked ETP launch — the first regulated institutional access vehicle for BNB — and a Binance product teaser tied to a HODLer airdrop drove the move. Today's give-back to $679.66 (-4.27%) is profit-taking, not narrative collapse. Set-up into next week: pullbacks to the $670-680 breakout zone are where buyers would test continuation.

BTC -4.42% WoW — record 10-day ETF outflow streak, mystery whale eats $30M slippage.

Beyond the headline ETF figures: a single counterparty paid roughly $30M in slippage on May 27 to exit a $1.26B IBIT block off-exchange (per CryptoSlate). That kind of premium implies a time-constrained seller. Strategy disposed of 32 BTC for $2.5M — first sale since 2022. The cumulative signal: institutional supply moved to the bid side of the order book all week.

ETH -4.47% WoW — lost $2,000 on Mon Jun 1 for the first time in months.

ETH printed $1,967 on Monday after closing the prior week at $2,007. Spot ETH ETFs ran roughly $241M outflow weekly / $540M monthly per SoSoValue cited by crypto.news. The technical break of $2,000 — a level that held for months — matters more than the headline percentage. A clean reclaim of $2,000 holding for 24+ hours would be the first signal the bleed is over.

CLARITY Act — industry sources expect a Senate vote before the August recess.

The market-structure bill that would set US crypto exchange and token classification rules is, per industry coverage, on track for a Senate vote before the August recess. The bill has cleared the House; Senate timing depends on floor management. Framed as industry expectation rather than confirmed schedule (Fox Business / Smarsh).

10 · NEW LAUNCHES, AIRDROPS & MILESTONES (WEEK AHEAD)

The verified launch/airdrop pipeline for the next 7 days is thin. Most of the discussion in the feeds traces to single sources or teasers without dated confirmations — under the protocol those are dropped, not softened.

What survived the cross-check: Binance's HODLer airdrop tied to BNB is the most actively discussed item — but specific snapshot windows, token sizes and eligibility criteria have not yet cleared a two-source bar in the published feeds we checked. The teaser drove BNB's Saturday rip; the actual airdrop mechanics remain thinly sourced. Saturday's HYPE $684M MEGA unlock is the only verified scheduled event of significance for the week.

11 · WEEK-AHEAD TRADE IDEAS

These are scenarios for discussion, framed around levels we can verify. They are not recommendations. Sizing and stop discipline matter more than entries.

Idea 1 · BTC | Short into broken $73K shelf | Bearish

Zone of interest: $73,000-73,500 on retest. T1: $71,000. T2: $69,500. Invalidation: close back above $74,500.

The $72-73K band held all of May as the floor. It cracked today. Old support becomes new resistance — any retest while the ETF outflow streak is still red is a classic short-the-rip setup. The catalyst inside the next 7 days is the continuation of ETF outflow data; the FOMC two weeks out is the primary invalidation risk.

Idea 2 · BNB | Long pullback to breakout zone | Bullish

Zone of interest: $670-685. T1: $720. T2: $740-760. Invalidation: close below $640.

BNB broke months-long $700 resistance on a fundamentally fresh catalyst (VanEck ETP + Binance teaser). Standard post-breakout pattern is a pullback to the breakout zone before continuation. Today's -4.3% give-back is the start of that pullback. The catalyst inside the next 7 days is any concrete announcement on the Binance product teaser.

Idea 3 · ETH | Wait for $2,000 reclaim | Neutral-Bullish

Zone of interest: Enter only after confirmed reclaim of $2,000 holding 24+ hours. T1: $2,100.

Invalidation: failure to reclaim within 5 sessions.

ETH lost $2,000 on Mon Jun 1 for the first time in months. A clean reclaim is the first technical signal the bleed is over. Front-running the reclaim attempt is high-risk — wait for confirmation. The catalyst inside the next 7 days is any inflection in ETH spot ETF flows.

Idea 4 · HYPE | Avoid into Saturday unlock | Bearish into the event

Zone of interest: No fresh longs before Sat Jun 6 unlock. T1: Reassess post-unlock once the supply is absorbed. Invalidation: N/A — this is an avoidance trade.

Saturday's $684M MEGA unlock is 2.54% of HYPE circulating supply. Even if the token has strong bidders, the absorption math is unforgiving — fresh supply at that magnitude typically depresses spot for 24-72 hours. Wait for the dust to settle before re-engaging.

12 · CATALYST CALENDAR (NEXT 7 DAYS)

When	Event	Context
Mon Jun 1	EIGEN unlock 04:00 UTC	$7.51M / 6.55% supply — already passed
Tue Jun 2	ENA unlock 07:00 UTC	$3.55M / 0.49% supply — small
Fri Jun 5	OPN unlock 12:00 UTC	$4.24M / 10.89% supply — large for cap
★★ Sat Jun 6	HYPE MEGA unlock 00:00 UTC	$684M / 2.54% — headline catalyst of the week
Sat Jun 6	RED unlock 16:00 UTC	$4.82M / 10.87% — dilution risk
(Forward)	FOMC Jun 16-17	SEP / dot-plot meeting — the only event between now and end-June that can flip macro

How to play the calendar: Nothing inside the next 7 days is large enough to flip the regime on its own. Saturday's HYPE unlock is a single-name event, the smaller unlocks are dilution risks for the affected tokens only. The macro regime stays fear-with-ETF-bleed until FOMC.
